The Center for Urban and Global Studies at Trinity College is sponsoring a research seminar on the transformation of Hartford, which will run from 2008 to 2010. Trinity College has been engaging Hartford through students' experiential learning and community outreach for a long time. The purpose of this seminar is to widen and deepen Trinity's engagement with and contribution to Hartford. This two-staged seminar will involve a broad group of Trinity and non-Trinity faculty and along with interested policy analysts, community representatives, and students. The first stage (2008-09) will feature extended discussions and background research on the critical issues facing Hartford. The second stage (2009-10) will aim to produce a research-based book that will contribute to classroom and experiential learning, urban scholarship, and community development.
