Richard Vedder is the director of the Center for College Affordability and Productivity, distinguished professor emeritus of Economics at Ohio University, adjunct scholar at the American Enterprise Institute and Senior Fellow at the Independent Institute. He has authored Going Broke by Degree: Why College Costs Too Much (Washington, DC: AEI Press, 2004), and has written and lectured extensively on the cost of higher education. In “Is Wal-Mart good or bad for America?” he demonstrated how important commercial innovations had been to recent economic growth. His hundreds of articles and reviews have appeared in numerous scholarly journals, as well as such publications as the Wall Street Journal, Christian Science Monitor, National Review, Washington Times, and Investor’s Business Daily. He received a BA from Northwestern University and an MA and PhD in Economics from the University of Illinois.