Students across all disciplines of the Arts & Humanities—also from outside the CTW Consortium—are encouraged to submit presentation abstracts by 9/30/18 to ugrad-hs@trincoll.edu. See www.trincoll.edu/CTWsyrnposium for submission guidelines.
Trinity College in Hartford, Connecticut is hosting the first annual CTW Undergraduate Symposium in the Arts and Humanities on Saturday, November 10th, 2018. This symposium will give undergraduate students from the three partner institutions, as well as other institutions in the region, an opportunity to present their original scholarly work in a professional setting. We invite submissions of scholarship and creative work focusing on any area in the arts and humanities, including fields such as languages and literatures, philosophy, theater and dance, art history, women’s studies, cultural studies, ethnic studies, religious studies, and film studies. Presentations should take the form of 10-15 minute papers or readings (all creative contributions must also include an analytical component).

Students interested in submitting an abstract to the symposium must contact a faculty member to act as a sponsor for developing their presentation. This faculty member will provide guidance as the student works through the various stages of preparing a professional conference presentation. This faculty member will also fill out a short sponsorship form that will be distributed to all students whose abstracts are accepted. Submission guidelines and further information can be found at: www.trincoll.edu/CTWsymposium

Submissions should be submitted no later than September 30th, 2018 to: ugrad hs@trincoll.edu. Any questions may also be directed to the same address.

Support for this symposium was provided in part by a grant from The Andrew W. Mellon Foundation.
