

Courses: Fall, 2019

History Department

HIST 209. African-American History—The experiences of African-Americans from the 17th century to the present with particular emphasis on life in slavery and in the twentieth century urban north, and current issues of concern in the African American community. This course is built on discussions as well as lectures, and its readings range from novels to narratives, from historical analyses about the past to contemporary writings by African American activists. Cross-Listed with AMST 209

MWF 9:00-9:50 a.m.

Instructor: Steven Marston, Visiting Assistant Professor