Trinity College has announced that George N. Marshall has been named assistant director of Campus Safety. The announcement was made by Campus Safety Director Brian J. Heavren.

Marshall comes to Trinity from Mitchell College in New London, Connecticut, where he served as the Campus Safety director. Marshall also served as the director of Campus Safety at Southern Vermont College in Bennington, Vermont. Marshall is retired from the New York State Police as a technical sergeant and brings to Trinity his extensive experience in emergency planning and preparedness, as well as in Title IX and community outreach. He continues to serve as a subject matter expert instructor for the National Center for Security & Preparedness (NCSP), an affiliate of The College of Emergency Preparedness, Homeland Security and Cybersecurity, at the University at Albany in New York.

At Trinity, Marshall will work closely with Heavren to extend the College’s programs to ensure the safety and security of students, faculty, and staff; to expand the College’s emergency preparedness plans; and to continue to forge strong and collaborative relationships with the campus community. He also will be involved with supervising the day-to-day operations of the department, working with the Dean of Students Office and the Title IX coordinator, and supervising the College’s compliance with the Clery Act, the federal law that requires schools to maintain and disclose information about crime on and near their campuses.

Marshall is a graduate of Queens College, City University of New York, and holds a B.A. in media/communications with a minor in English. He obtained a graduate certificate in public sector management with a concentration in homeland security from the Rockefeller College of Public Affairs & Policy at the University at Albany. He joins Trinity on September 26.

In addition, Ramon Rosario has been appointed to the rank of captain. Rosario previously served as the department’s lieutenant, but due to the nature of the work performed and an increase in his responsibilities, the position has been reclassified to captain.

Rosario has been with the department for 21 years and has served as a Campus Safety officer, sergeant, and lieutenant. He has served as the evening shift supervisor and as a member of the CORE Emergency Management Team. Rosario has authored and implemented the department’s operational plans for significant events that occur on campus, including Spring Weekend, Commencement, and President Joanne Berger-Sweeney’s Inauguration. He has received certifications from the Federal Emergency Management Agency, the Department of Emergency Management and Public Protection, the Clery Center, and the Association of Title IX Administrators.

Rosario will be responsible for assisting in the management of the department, developing and implementing training programs for the department and the College community, and developing strategies to increase the efficiency and effectiveness of the department.