

I am comparative urbanist with a research focus on the historical, political and environmental geography of urban planning in Sub-Saharan Africa. Most of my career, I have focused on cities in Tanzania, Kenya and, to a lesser extent, Zambia. Since coming to Trinity in 2011, my comparative urban studies lens has widened geographically, to include cities in China, the US, and the Caribbean. Regarding the Caribbean: in my last book, Rethinking Urbanism (Bristol University Press, 2020), I had empirical material on Port of Spain, Trinidad and San Juan, Puerto Rico. In that book, and the one I am currently writing, Postcolonial Urban Studies (2025, Agenda Publishing), my conceptual framework is built around the writings of Édouard Glissant from Martinique, and this new book will have content on Fort-de-France as well as Kingston, Jamaica.
